It's not too late to get scholarships!

You may have heard that there are scholarships out there "with your name on them." Trouble is, you have to go out and find them. Here's how.

One easy and productive way to find this money is to use free online scholarship search tools, such as the Fastweb, Unigo, Chegg, Scholarships.com, The College Board, Cappex, Petersons, etc. But before you get started, take a few minutes to think about what makes you unique. For example, did you know there are scholarships for left-handed people? What about first-generation students? And don't forget your parents. Their residency, heritage, employment, memberships, etc. can all lead to scholarship opportunities.

See what scholarships your top colleges offer. Many colleges have scholarships for their students. There are different scholarships for incoming freshmen, transfer students, first generation students and more.

Other Ways to Find Scholarships

Clubs, foundations, and associations with which you have some connection or interest may offer scholarships. You can also try government agencies involved in education, such as state education offices.

Going Local

Local scholarships are often the easiest to get because there is less competition and the scholarship judges may already be familiar with you or your family. Here are some other local sources you can try:

- Your and your parents' employers
- Local businesses
- Local community and service organizations
- Local chapters of clubs, foundations, and associations
- Local religious groups
- City and county education offices

Start Now (If You Haven't Already)

You can begin your search—and your applications—anytime. Pay close attention to the deadlines and requirements for each scholarship. Some ask you not to apply until a certain date. Some are open year-round. Some require a separate application and supporting documents, such as your high school transcript.

Sometimes it's hard to get started, especially if you think the application requires a lot of heavy-duty research. To get motivated, look upon it as a treasure hunt, and you won't be far from the truth.

January is here and the first semester is almost over! Believe it or not, you're almost halfway through your Senior year! Continue rocking your year with these tips:

Winter

- Continue to search and apply for scholarships.
- Keep rigorous courses in your schedule.
- Make sure you are on track to graduate and make up any credits that you need.
- Attend all your classes- Attendance still matters!

Spring

- Watch the mail for college admission decisions and financial aid award letters.
- Visit colleges and decide which to attend. Be sure to pay deposits and/or defer before college deadlines.
- Continue to make your senior year count. Keep grades and attendance in good standing. Colleges can revoke admissions/scholarships if grades decline.
- Continue to apply for scholarships – deadlines go all the way through July and into August for money for the fall!
- Put on your cap and gown and enjoy your graduation!
